BLAINE'S GRAVE

Marked by an Old Hickory Tree at His Request.

HE CHOSE THE LIVING MONUMENT

And Desired No Impressive or Costly Stone-When He Bought the Cemctery Lot He Asked that the Tree Remain and that It Should Mark the Head of His Own Grave-It was Blasted by Lightning, but Not Killed.

Washington Post. There is in this city a noted grave unmarked by any monument save that of nature, an old forest tree, and yet a grave that is the Mecca of more pilgrims than any other in this part of the country save that of the first President at Mount Vernon. It is the grave of James G. Blaine in Oak Hill cemetery. To the casual observer there is nothing about the spot that marks it as the burial place of one of the most prominent figures in American history since the civil war. To the future antiquarian searching out the history of the nation's illustrious dead there will be nothing but inference on which to base a theory of James G. Blaine's burial place. There is not even a raised mound of earth over this or the other two ad-joining graves. The graves of Walker Blaine and of his sister, Mrs. Alice Stan-Blaine and of his sister, Mrs. Alice Stanwood Coppinger, are marked by plain monuments, the first a round-top slab of marble without a line of ornamentation except the inscription. This reads: "Walker Blaine, born Augusta, Me, May 18, 1855. Died, Washington, January 15, 1890." The grave of Mrs. Coppinger is marked by a Celtic cross, about four feet high, inscribed as follows: "Alice Stanwood, daughter of James G. Blaine, and wife of Colonel J. J. Coppinger, U. S. A. Born, Augusta, Me., March 18, 1860. Died, Washington, February 2, 1890. Erected by her sorrowing husband."

JUST THE INITIALS.

JUST THE INITIALS. Over the grave of J. G. Blaine there is neither monument or inscription save a small footstone with the initials "J. G. B." At the head of the grave stands a blasted tree, which is, in accordance with the dead statesman's wish, his only monument. The tree was a magnificent hickory one of many of its kind that divide the honors of the hillside with the magnificent only that give the with the magnificent oaks that give the with the magnificent oaks that give the cemetery its name. The absence of a moeument is not a sign of neglect, but was his own request. Upon the death of his favorite son, Walker Blaine, the then secretary of state selected a lot in Oak Hill cemetery, one down the hill from the little red sandstone chapel and overlooking the waters of Rock Creek. Here Walker Blaine was buried, and when, not long afterward, Mr. and when, not long afterward, Mr. Blaine's daughter, Mrs. Coppinger, died, he bought the adjoining lot, where she was interred. On this lot there stood an old hickory tree. Some years before it had been struck by lightning, and had it had been struck by lightning, and had died at the top, but it was trimmed and revived, and now bids fair to reach as green an old age as any other tree in the cemetery. Mr. Blaine requested when he bought the second lot that this tree should never be destroyed, and that on his death he should be buried beneath it. When, after weeks of illness, the end came, his wish was carried out, and the tree now stands in lieu of a monument to mark his resting place.

PHAGRIMS SEEK THE GRAVE.

PILGRIMS SEEK THE GRAVE.

Yet this almost unmarked grave is more sought out than that of any other in the cemetery, and visitors every day hurry past the many handsome monuments, even that marking the grave of the sweet singer, John Howard Payne, to stand a moment beneath the old hickory tree that marks the last resting place of the "Plumed Knight."

place of the "Plumed Knight."
"Everybody wants ta see Blaine's grave," said Superintendent J. T. Motter. "I point it out and tell them about it till I get tired and worn out. It is more visited than any grave in the cemetery. I don't think the body will ever be moved. I am sure it was not his wish that it should, for when he selected libat lot he pointed out the old tree and asked me to see that it was never destroyed, as he wanted it for his only monument."

snies of stocks would be stock exchange to-day was irregular on a small volume of business, and the net changes on the day are, except in a very few instances, confined within fractional limits. Chiego Gas was in good demand, the buying being credited to an inside pool. Sugar was the centre of the speculative interest and fluctuated within a range of 2% per cent. The stock declined 35 per cent in the early dealings on liquidations induced by fear of unfavorable congressional action, but the downward tendency was quickly checked by the inauguration of a covering movement. This was supplemented by purchases for the sugar clique, with an advance of 2% per cent. The general market opened weak with the bears hammering the grangers, causing this ground to give way and the other shares dealt in to recede in sympathy, except Chicano Gas, which was in good buying demand and moved upward. The rest of the market closed strong.

Wool.

Boston.—On account of the heliday, sales in the wool market for the past week are not up to the average; but the market still ishows a steady tone. Everything remains quiet with prices unclanged and no sales of any consequence. Orders already booked keep the woolen mills running quite full, but buyers have been weary of late and no change in the situation can be expected until the new woolen goods schedule goes into effect on January I, when there will doubtless be a large influx of foreign goods. It will then be known how much lower the foreign manufacturers will force competition.
